First Vice President - Investments

Faye specializes in personalized retirement and financial planning and believes a sound investment plan is critical in helping her clients achieve their financial and life goals. Once she fully understands your goals, she will recommend a suitable investment program and monitor it on an ongoing basis.

Faye began her financial services career in 1979 with the Rocky Mount office of Wheat, First Securities, which later became Wachovia Securities. Faye initially served as an Account Administrator/Sales Assistant, becoming Series 7 registered in 1984 before she was promoted to Operations Manager in the firm's Wilson office. She became a Financial Advisor in 1999. In 2000, she joined Davenport & Company and now operates her financial practice in both Raleigh and Rocky Mount.

Active in her community, Faye serves as a sustaining member of the Junior Guild of Rocky Mount and is involved with the Benvenue Country Club. Additionally, she is a committee chair and fundraiser for United Community Ministries, a nonprofit organization that aids homeless individuals and families in Nash and Edgecombe Counties. Faye is an identical twin and has one grown son, Trey. In her free time, she enjoys spending time at the beach or on the Pasquotank River with her fiancé, Sam, who has three granddaughters she adores. She also gets together weekly with a group of girlfriends for wine and dinner.

Faye is supported by Ruby Deans, a Registered Client Service Associate. The two have been a professional team at Davenport since 2000 and are both committed to providing clients with the highest level of professionalism and personal service.
